It would seem obvious that with Internet service already being provided by dialup, DSL, cable, satellite and wireless it would be foolish to add BPL to the list considering all of the existing radio services, some, like FEMA, critical, that will be put at risk due to RFI issues.

Do we really need another means of delivering Internet services? Or is it simply a way to appease the power utilities?